WHAT WENT WRONG?

A Bronx teen accused of fatally stabbing a classmate was allegedly bullied for years. 6

WELCOME TO METRO.US

NIKKI M. MASCALI, REPORTER

Details continue to emerge in the city's first in-school slaying in nearly 25 years. Abel Cedeno, the 18-year-old accused of fatally stabbing his Bronx classmate Matthew McCree, 15 and seriously injuring Ariane Laboy, 16, endured years of bullying due to his sexual orientation and ethnicity, his family says. But the stepdad of the slain teen denies any such allegations.

JULIA LOUIS-DREYFUS BATTLES BREAST CANCER

1 Emmy-winning comedic actress Julia Louis-Dreyfus said that she was battling breast cancer and highlighted the case for universal healthcare. Louis-Dreyfus, 56, who plays foul-mouthed fictitious U.S. president Selina Meyer on HBO's "Veep," said, "One in eight women get breast cancer. Today, I'm the one," in a short post on social media. "The good news is that I have the most glorious group of supportive and caring family and friends and fantastic insurance through my union. The bad news is that not all women are so lucky, so let's fight all cancers and make universal health care a reality," the actress wrote. Louis-Dreyfus won a record sixth Emmy award for comedy actress for her role as Meyer earlier this month. She became famous in the early 1990s for her role of Elaine Benes on NBC's "Seinfeld."

TRUMP: NFL OWNERS ARE AFRAID OF THEIR PLAYERS

2 President Donald Trump said he believes that owners of National Football League teams are afraid of their players, his latest criticism of NFL players kneeling during the U.S. national anthem at games to protest racial disparities in the country. The Republican president told "Fox & Friends" in an interview broadcast on Thursday that he is friends with many NFL team owners and they were "in a box" over how to handle the kneeling protests. "They say, 'we are in a situation where we have to do something.' I think they're afraid of their players, you want to know the truth. And I think it's disgraceful," he said. The White House did not immediately respond to a request for comment on whether the president was concerned his comments might inflame racial tensions.

INSURED LOSSES FROM MARIA TOTAL $15-30B

4 Risk modeling firm RMS said on Thursday that it estimated insured losses from Hurricane Maria of $15-30 billion. The estimate relates to wind damage, storm surge and inland flooding from the hurricane, with Puerto Rico and Dominica suffering the most destruction, RMS said in a statement. Rival modeling firm AIR Worldwide earlier this week estimated insured losses for Maria, which hit the Caribbean last week, of $40-$85 billion.

US JUDGE: BLACK LIVES MATTER CANNOT BE SUED

5 A Louisiana police officer cannot sue Black Lives Matter because it is a social movement, a U.S. judge ruled on Thursday, finding the campaign could not be held responsible for injuries he got at a protest. The unidentified officer sued Black Lives Matter and an activist involved in a July 2016 protest in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where the officer was struck by a rock. The Black Lives Matter movement began with the hashtag #BlackLivesMatter on social media in 2012 after black high school student Trayvon Martin was shot dead in Sanford, Florida, by neighborhood watch volunteer George Zimmerman. Zimmerman was acquitted of second degree murder and manslaughter. It grew into a nationwide movement in response to the use of excessive force by police, particularly against black men.

Bronx teen allegedly bullied for years prior to stabbing classmates

"After it had been reported numerous times and there was no reaction from the school, Abel felt [there was] no other way out."

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

Abel Cedeno, the 18-year-old accused of fatally stabbing his classmate Matthew McCree at their Bronx high school Wednesday, endured years of abuse over his "perceived sexual orientation" and ethnicity, a representative for his family said at his arraignment.

"The kids were calling him a f—t, calling him a s—c," Savannah Hornbeck said Thursday, according to the New York Daily News. "After it had been reported numerous times and there was no reaction from the school, Abel felt [there was] no other way out."

After what police described as a two-week-long argument between Cedeno, McCree, 15, and Ariane Laboy, 16, things escalated Wednesday morning in a classroom at the Urban Assembly School for Wildlife Conservation in East Tremont.

More than a dozen other students were in the classroom at the time of the stabbing, which occurred after McCree and Laboy were throwing broken pencils at Cedeno's head, police said.

Cedeno struck both McCree and Laboy with a 3-inch switchblade knife then walked into the hallway, where a counselor confiscated the weapon, NYPD Chief of Detectives Robert Boyce said. Cedeno then went to the assistant principal's office, where police were called and he was arrested.

McCree and Laboy were taken to St. Barnabas Hospital, where McCree was pronounced dead. Laboy remains in critical but stable condition.

"The defendant admits to purchasing a [switchblade] knife two weeks before online and stabbing two people," Assistant District Attorney Nancy Borko said.

Iris Couvertier, a family friend, told the Daily News she spoke with the teen after his arrest.

"Those two kids in the class, they hit him," she said. "He said that they hit him in the face. He said it's because he's gay or bisexual."

McCree's stepfather, Kyle Victor, denied allegations that his stepson was a bully.

"He was very loving," Victor told the New York Post. "He was in no way bad. … They're making it look like Matthew did not like gay people. That's wrong, too."

In the wake of the stabbing, the first slaying inside a city school in nearly 25 years, authorities have installed two body scanners and two X-ray machines at the Urban Assembly School for Wildlife Conservation.

Cedeno has been placed on suicide watch and is being held without bail. He has been charged with one count each of murder, manslaughter and attempted manslaughter and two counts each of attempted murder, assault and criminal possession of a weapon.

With National Coffee Day proceeds, Coffee Kids brews opportunities for next-generation growers

Coffee Kids in Central America grind coffee as part of their hands-on training. COFFEE KIDS

The organization ensures youth in Tanzania, Colombia and Central America have a sustainable coffee supply for their future – and their communities.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

Millions across the globe cannot function without coffee — including the farmers who grow it and are increasing in age. That's why today, National Coffee Day, Coffee Kids is partnering with coffee shops around the country to celebrate this unofficial holiday beyond giveaways and marketing ploys.

Coffee Kids, which was founded in 1988 to provide a better quality of life for growers in Latin America, shifted its focus to the next generation when it became an independent program of nonprofit Hanns R. Neumann Stiftung in 2015.

"Since then, it's really been really focused on young adults in coffee-producing communities, giving them the resources to be productive contributors and coffee farmers and ensuring a sustainable coffee supply for the future and sustainability in the community," said Joanna Furgiuele, Coffee Kids' fundraising and program manager.

The organization works with about 300 young adults between the ages of 16 and 30 in Tanzania, Colombia and in the Trifinio region of Central America, where the borders of Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador meet. An additional 90 are slated to join in Tanzania in the coming weeks.

"The training is a combination of agricultural and technical skills, as well as business and entrepreneurship, understanding cost and profit, how to develop a savings account, how to write a business plan and understand return on investment," Furgiuele said.

Oftentimes, the young adults "are more seen as the help on the farm, not necessarily the ones that have much responsibility or say in how that land is cultivated or decisions that are being made," she added.

Coffee Kids' mentorships show the older community members that the youth is interested in investing in their community — and often in ways that supplement income from coffee, which is only harvested once a year.

Those side businesses generally operate around coffee and agriculture, Furgiuele said, and range from providing harvesting supplies and roasting their own coffee to raising farm animals.

Several coffee shops in New York City will support Coffee Kids on National Coffee Day Friday.

Blank Slate in NoMad will donate all proceeds to the organization, as will several merchants at the pop-up European-style plaza in Grand Central Terminal's Vanderbilt Hall. Those include Bien Cuit, Café Grumpy, Financier Patisserie, Great Northern Food Hall's Brownsville Roasters, Irving Farm Coffee Roasters, Joe Coffee, Oren's Daily Roast, Shake Shack and Zaro's Family Bakery.

Nobletree Coffee in the World Trade Center will also donate 20 percent of proceeds to Coffee Kids.

The donations will support the organization's programs, including financing youth business plans in Colombia and supporting the new recruits in Tanzania.

The Finest & the Bravest: How cops and firefighters are helping in Puerto Rico

Heroic first responders are going the extra mile to aid people on the island in the aftermath of Hurricane Maria.

DAVID CORDERO MERCADO
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

The fatigue that inevitably comes with repeated 12-hour work shifts isn't deterring police and fire officials in Puerto Rico from going the extra mile in the wake of Hurricane Maria.

The local heroes have been working almost nonstop since well before Maria struck the island. According to Officer Jose Antonio Rivera Ortiz, the long shifts began from the emergency that arose in the wake of Hurricane Irma three weeks ago. But that has not taken away the spirit of Rivera, 42, who yesterday was located on Pinero Avenue in Rio Piedras controlling traffic.

"I've been able to help people and give them support, even if it's in the form of guidance," said the San Juan officer as he directed traffic. "We are controlling things, people have been cooperating."

"I have not been able to go see [my family] because [police] are glued to our work, but I have been able to have telephone communication," he explained about relatives in Ponce and Yauco.

Not only have state police officers been active at all times, but the municipal police have also stepped up. Sgt. Luis Diaz Figueroa has been working alongside 20 other agents in the area of Santurce to oversee traffic control and any other tasks that the community requires.

"Citizens have brought police food and water, and we're thankful because we've, in fact, been neglecting our own needs to care for others," said Figueroa.

The sergeant has three children — 8, 10 and 21 years old. The oldest of the three is in the Army and is also acting in a support role on the island after Maria. Figueroa finally saw his children, who live in Naranjito, on Sunday.

"It's part of the work that we have to do," he said of his time away from his kids. "It's the work we chose."

Police aren't the only ones working long hours for the sake of the island. Puerto Rico's firefighters have also been working around the clock to clear debris and attend to emergencies.

Lt. Santos Ayala of the Barrio Obrero fire station in San Juan said firefighters have worked hand-in-hand with medical emergencies officials in the rescue and transportation of people.

"From the moment the sun broke through after the hurricane, we've been struck by what we've seen, what we've experienced," said Ayala. He described "moments of anguish" after the storm, when he didn't know whether his family was safe. He was able to reach his wife and two children, aged 10 and 19, about 42 hours after Maria had passed. After that, his 19-year-old daughter decided to join her father's job as a volunteer and the firefighters.

"I wanted to join my dad to help Puerto Rico any way I can since we are in a crisis, and I have never experienced anything like this," said his daughter, Sannette Ayala Roman.

The teen recounted her reunion with her father: "I came out with tears. It was a very beautiful moment because all the tension went away."

Immediately after meeting up with her father, the young woman rode with him in the fire truck. "I've always liked this," she said.

About 1,650 firefighters are working around Puerto Rico in debris removal, rescue and emergency care, as are 86 additional NYPD firefighters who came to the island to help with recovery. About 372 Puerto Rican state police are patrolling roads around the island.

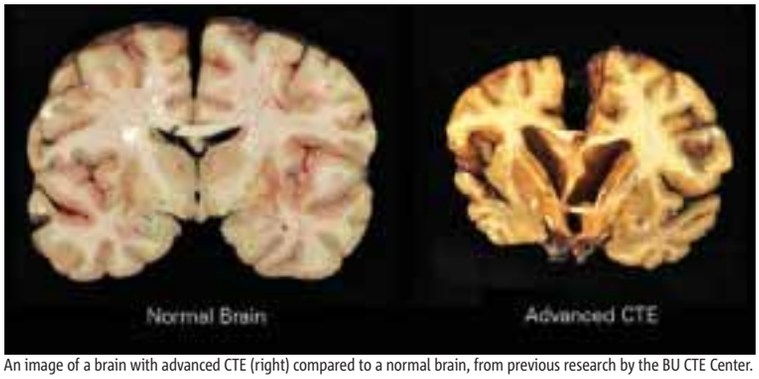
BU researchers may have found a way to diagnose CTE in someone living

This is a breakthrough for the degenerative brain disease, which currently can only be identified after a patient dies.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us



An image of a brain with advanced CTE (right) compared to a normal brain, from previous research by the BU CTE Center. WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Boston University has been leading the research on chronic traumatic encephalopathy, or CTE, and it may have just made a breakthrough after identifying a possible way to diagnose CTE in living patients.

CTE is a degenerative brain disease often found in those who suffer repeated head trauma, like football players. Most recently, it was confirmed that former Patriots player Aaron Hernandez had an advanced stage of CTE after researchers examined his brain posthumously.

That's the thing – medical professionals are been able to diagnose CTE only after someone has died. The new discovery means treatments could be developed to help those suffering from CTE, researchers said, and even possibly prevent the condition.

"This is a step forward from our knowledge gained in understanding CTE from brain donations," Ann McKee, the study's senior author and director of BU's CTE Center, told BU Today. "It's a hopeful step. The whole point is to understand as much as we can from the individuals who've fallen so we can apply it to our future veterans and athletes."

In the study, published in the Public Library of Science's journal Plos One on Wednesday, researchers identified a biomarker, protein CCL11, which may help distinguish between CTE and Alzheimer's disease. Both conditions often have similar symptoms, researchers say, and Alzheimer's also can only be diagnosed via an autopsy.

Researchers studied the brains of 23 former college and professional football players for the study, comparing them with the brains of 50 people who had Alzheimer's and were not athletes, and to 18 control people who were not athletes.

"Significantly elevated" levels of that biomarker, CCL11, were found in the brains of people with CTE.

Researchers also compared how high that CCL11 level was to how long those people had played football, and found a positive correlation between the two.

Though the findings are important, they're a building block — more research is needed, BU said, to see if higher levels of CCL11 happen earlier or later in the CTE process, and if those levels can predict how severe someone's disease will be. BU researchers have previously identified four stages of CTE.

NFL

Though the scientific discovery could help athletes, it may not be good news for the NFL.

Andrew Brandt, former vice president for the Green Bay Packers and columnist at Sports Illustrated's MMQB, pointed out in a tweet that CTE still isn't a covered condition in the NFL's concussion litigation settlement.

"I see a new motion or refiling, in the distance!" former NFL player Seth Joyner said in response to Brandt. "This could be a game changer, the NFL's worst nightmare!"

TRUMP ANALYSIS

Experts call President Trump "the most dangerous man in the world"

A group of experts who have analyzed the president's behavior have reached some scary conclusions about Trump's mental health, concluding that he exhibits symptoms of paranoia, living in an alternate reality and three personality disorders. The analyses, collected in the new issue of Newsweek, included those of several experts who have studied areas such as violence, law and psychoanalysis.

Some of their findings:

Trump lacks a sense of reality.

"Trump's insistence on the truth of matters proved to be untrue ['alternative facts'] is well known, even when such denial is not in his interest," noted Dr. Lance Dodes of the Boston Psychoanalytic Society. He pointed to Trump's embrace of birtherism and his claims that Barack Obama wiretapped Trump Tower, that he lost the popular vote to millions voting illegally and that his inauguration crowd was the biggest ever.

He's a perfect storm of personality disorders.

Trump acts only in the moment, with disregard for consequences and a focus on how things will affect him above others. "In Trump, we have a frightening Venn diagram consisting of three circles: The first is extreme present hedonism; the second, narcissism; and the third, bullying behavior," said Phillip Zombardo, a professor emeritus at Stanford. "These three circles overlap in the middle to create an impulsive, immature, incompetent person who, when in the position of ultimate power, easily slides into the role of tyrant, complete with family members sitting at his proverbial 'ruling table.'"

He makes his own truth.

"Time gave Trump an opportunity to clarify his refusal to correct his long string of falsehoods," said journalist Gail Sheehy. "What the interview produced instead was an astonishing revelation of his thinking: He states what he wants to be true." MICHAEL MARTIN

Digital screens are coming to subway stations, and train cars will display ads. GETTY IMAGES

New digital screens will play video ads on subways

The installations will also provide riders with information like service changes and when the next train or bus is coming.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

In the near future, your subway commute will be inundated with ads streaming from thousands of screens on station platforms and inside train cars.

The MTA announced this week that it has awarded Outfront Media a 10-year contract to advertise in subways, buses and commuter railroads throughout the MTA network. The contract concerns traditional and digital advertising, and Outfront has big plans for the latter.

The media company will install 14,000 digital screens in subway stations and on platforms for the New York City Transit, Long Island Rail Road and Metro-North Railroad networks.

These screens will be replacing some paper advertisements and also providing "both advertising and customer communications," according to the MTA, including real-time information on the next trains and buses, track information, service status and planned service changes.

But wait, there's more — Outfront will also install more than 35,000 additional screens in New York City Transit, Long Island Rail Road and Metro-North train cars.

That means "traditional static" — nonmoving — ads will be significantly reduced on cars as the digital screens take over. The screens will play only video and not sound, the MTA confirmed, and the train car screens will also be used for customer communication.

"This contract represents an entirely new approach for the MTA, offering dramatically improved customer communications and an upside potential for more advertising revenues," said MTA Chairman Joseph Lhota in a statement. "Outfront Media's commitment to installing digital screens in stations and on rolling stock will provide us with new ways of generating advertising revenue while at the same time giving us a new platform to quickly and effectively get relevant information to our customers."

The contract with Outfront also comes with a five-year renewal option. The MTA estimates that installing all these digital screens will cost $800 million over that 15-year term. Outfront will handle that cost, which will be recovered from the ad revenues.

Along with the installation of the screens, Outfront will also be responsible for the operation and maintenance of the network. Per the contract, the media company needs to install more than 17,000 screens by the end of 2019, and more than 80 percent of all screens by 2022.

Deleting tweets from verified Trump Twitter account might be illegal

President Donald Trump was wrong about Luther Strange, and when victory was declared in favor of his opponent for Alabama's open Senate seat, some tweets immediately disappeared from the verified Trump Twitter account.

Specifically missing were three tweets in which Trump peddled his endorsement of Strange and encouraged people to vote for him. But as most people know, nothing really ever disappears on the internet, and those deleted tweets are preserved in perpetuity on a growing list of other tweets Trump has deleted from his verified Twitter account — tweets some legal experts say could spell trouble for the Trump administration.

Since Trump took office on Jan. 20, his @realdonaldtrump account has deleted 41 posts, according to archives maintained by ProPublica, a nonprofit journalism website. That number swells to 49 if you count tweets deleted from the @POTUS account since Trump's inauguration.

Those deleted tweets are now central to a debate on whether Trump is violating federal presidential record-keeping laws.

The Presidential Records Act mandates the preservation of White House communications, which includes electronic messages like email, Facebook and Twitter.

Some legal experts say Trump's personal Twitter account might have gotten off the hook if not for Trump's own White House staff declaring his Twitter posts as official government statements.

Still, Trump isn't the only president to delete tweets; Barack Obama also deleted an occasional tweet, Politico reported, but his administration archived those tweets.

The key question is whether the Trump administration is doing the same, which according to themselves, they are. In March, David Ferriero, who heads the National Archives and Records Administration, told senators he was "informed by White House officials that they are, in fact," archiving tweets deleted from Trump's personal verified Twitter account.

In June, three ethics groups filed suit against Trump, demanding that courts stop him from deleting posts from his social media pages.

The Trump administration has until Oct. 6 to respond. ERIN TIERNAN

Doug Liman and Tom Cruise on set UNIVERSAL PICTURES

'American Made' tells the story of the country's last real cowboy

Doug Liman talks to Metro about his pride in American opportunism

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroNewYork
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

"American Made" director Doug Liman wanted to celebrate the ambition that turned the USA into a superpower, and so he threw his weight behind a based-on-real-life film and cast the country's biggest male lead.

While Barry Seal (Tom Cruise) went from being a bored commercial pilot to a CIA spy to a drug smuggler for the Medellin Cartel, the journey was packed with danger and risk. But it also made him a very, very rich man. Liman believed this story could only have happened here.

"Barry is quintessentially American. I wouldn't use greed — I would use opportunist. If you're walking down the street in London and saw a $100 bill laying there, you might turn it into the police station. In America, the crime would be to not pick it up and take it. That really is what is great about America.

"That attitude is why we have been an economic power house. From the Henry Ford assembly line to Facebook to Uber, the disrupters, the people seeing opportunity and taking it are American. That really is the spirit that 'American Made' is looking to celebrate. Barry Seal made a fortune while working for the CIA.

Liman said the movie "is not a movie about self-flagellation."

"The good and the bad go together. But that American spirit, that can-do attitude ... we flew to the moon! There's no other country that could put somebody else on the moon. No one else has done it after all these years."

GETTY

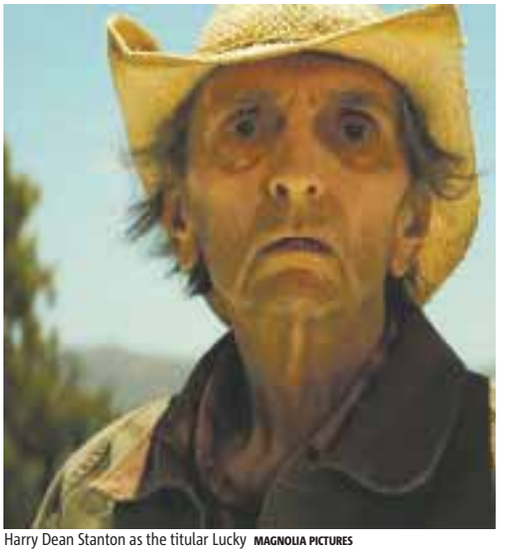
Liman said that when he first leafed through Gary Spinelli's script, he instantly connected to Seal, especially when it came to "his attitude toward living and his pursuit of adventure at almost any cost."

"I am also a pilot. So that quest for adventure and damn the risks goes hand in hand with being a pilot, because it is extremely risky and about the greatest adventure you can have."

For Liman, Seal was the last of his kind. He goes as far as to call Seal the last American cowboy. But rather than riding a horse, he piloted planes packed with cocaine.

"American Made" comes out Sept. 29.

'Lucky' is an Oscar worthy farewell from Harry Dean Stanton



Harry Dean Stanton as the titular Lucky MAGNOLIA PICTURES

The death of Harry Dean Stanton on September 15 immediately left the movie world wistful. Over the course of his career, the 91-year-old subtly made his way through some of the greatest films ever committed to celluloid, in a miraculously effortless manner.

Stanton was so impactful, in fact, that screenwriters Drago Sumonja and Logan Sparks were inspired to write the script for "Lucky" — out September 29 — purely based on the actor's work. John Carroll Lynch, who directed the film, says as much over the phone.

"The idea for 'Lucky' came from a drive across the desert, rather appropriately, from the two writers. They were talking about their desire to work with Harry Dean Stanton," Lynch says. "They came up with this idea of an old guru who lives on the edge of this desert town. They really wanted to capture the world view that Harry Dean had imparted over the years."

Lynch admits that there was no backup plan had Stanton declined. "It was a situation where, if he'd said, 'Nah, I don't think so,' that would have been it," Lynch confesses. "The character was deeply inspired by him, so much so that most of the material was autobiographical. We were almost working on a meta level."

Shooting the prolific Stanton — and then re-watching his performance while editing it together over the last two years — has only taken Lynch's appreciation of the actor's talents and efforts to another echelon.

"I have spent the last two years or so in intense circumstances watching his work over and over and over again, and marveling at the appreciation of a man," Lynch says. "And to watch his work and to cut his work and to watch over the performance he was after, I have only grown to appreciate both him as an artist and as a man."

And while Stanton's death left Lynch riddled with sadness, he admits that "Lucky" offers fans the perfect opportunity to bid farewell to the actor.

"It is a pretty good way to say goodbye. In some ways I do believe that it was the role of a lifetime, because his life was so wrapped up in the creation of it. The screenplay was written for him, it was written kind of inspired by him, if there is ever the role of a lifetime then this was it." GREGORY WAKEMAN

"American Made"

Director: Doug Liman
Stars: Tom Cruise, Domhnall Gleeson
Rating: R

Tom Cruise as drug smuggler Barry Seals. UNIVERSAL PICTURES

If you've been waiting to see Tom Cruise back in the cockpit ever since "Top Gun" (it's been 31 years, people), now's your moment. "American Made" pairs "Bourne Identity" and "Mr. & Mrs. Smith" director Doug Liman with the Scientologist of the skies in this epic depiction of real-life drug smuggler Barry Seal. It may be hard to believe that the CIA recruited a TWA pilot and pitted him against cartels in South America and the Reagan White House, but they sure did, and the result is part gangster classic, part big screen thriller. It is visually arresting, preposterously entertaining and, simply put, a whole lot of fun.

Liam Neeson as "Deep Throat" in this underwhelming biopic. SONY PICTURES CLASSIC

"Mark Felt: The Man Who Brought Down the White House"

Director: Peter Landesman
Stars: Liam Neeson, Diane Lane, Josh Lucas
Rating: NR

You know what's even more exhausting than saying "Mark Felt: The Man Who Brought Down the White House"? Watching it. For a film that's rife with potential (especially considering today's political climate), from its weighty, twisty plot to its leading man, "Mark Felt" just keeps taking wrong turns as it tries to depict the story of "Deep Throat" and the Watergate scandal of 1974. Writer and director Peter Landesman actually builds a compelling mood and tone as he lays the breadcrumbs that will ultimately lead to Nixon's downfall, establishing why Felt deemed it necessary to expose the scandal, but, rather than the leak coming across as a national duty, Felt comes across as petty (hey, maybe that's how it really went down, but we weren't there ... or were we?!). The film's subplot about his family feels shoe-horned in and only jolts rather than enhances the story. Neeson is towering and, well, fine, and there are some impressive supporting performances, but ultimately "Mark Felt: The Man Who Brought Down The White House" feels lightweight. And that's before you start comparing it to "All the President's Men." GW

"Lucky"

Director: John Carroll Lynch
Stars: Harry Dean Stanton, David Lynch

It's always hard to be objective when you watch a film starring a beloved actor who has just passed away. Considering the length and breadth of Harry Dean Stanton's illustrious career this was always going to be doubly difficult when it came to "Lucky." Heavily inspired by his personality and viewpoint, this tale of a 90-year-old atheist's spiritual journey almost feels like a biopic, as Stanton meshed perfectly with the character of Lucky. It may not feel comfortable watching a wizened man in his final days washing his armpits, but the 86 minutes you invest become worthwhile when you make it to the final, highly emotional scene. It's a performance that puts Stanton as a posthumous Best Actor Oscar contender. But, of course, that might just be the grief talking.

How to attract your ideal mentor, according to "Great News"

Tina Fey — at her least Liz Lemon-ist — as Diana and Andrea Martin as Carol in the season two premiere of "Great News." TYLER GOLDEN/NBC

"Great News" is back! In last night's season two premiere, "The Breakdown" gets a new network head, played by Tina Fey in perhaps her least Liz-Lemon-like appearance yet. Fey plays Diana Saint Tropez, the author of a book called "Boardroom Bitch," the only female Fortune 500 CEO of a non-shapewear-related company and Carol's (Andrea Martin) worst nightmare. Katie (Briga Heelan) goes to great lengths to impress her and win a spot as her protégé. While her methods are questionable, they do eventually kind of work. Don't try these at home, kids!

1 Do your research

Katie has read all of Diana's books — including one called "Everything Your Mother Told You Was a Lie," which throws Carol into a tailspin — and she knows she's supposed to listen like a man and never frame a statement like a question.

2 Ask for what you want

Unfortunately, once Katie's in Diana's office she can't stop framing her statements like questions. Even though she knows Diana hates that? And then she can't stop apologizing?

3 Describe a weird dream

"You were holding me and telling me I was good enough and we were in a lake topless" is a very professional way to talk about your career goals.

4 Start stalking

Katie knows that the cool thing about office buildings is that everybody has to use the elevator eventually. Right? It's a perfect way for her to just happen to run into Diana and announce that she's taken her advice and started freezing her eggs!

5 Blame your mother

This is what finally works! After realizing that Katie was raised by a "sexist old-fashioned lunatic" and still came out ok-ish, Diana decides Katie has potential and is worth mentoring. It's a dream come true!

Coffee-Men at Round K Cafe PROVIDED

Grand Central Terminal
On Friday from 7 a.m.-2 p.m., Vanderbilt Hall will transform into the Grand Central Café, a "European-style café plaza" with latte art demos, live music and $1 cups of coffee from the station's vendors including Café Grumpy, Financier Patisserie, Brownsville Roasters at the Great Northern Food Hall, Irving Farm Coffee Roasters, Joe Coffee, Oren's Daily Roast, Shake Shack and Zaro's Family Bakery. Or try a 4-oz. sample of them all for $5. 89 E. 42nd St., grandcentralterminal.com

Round K Cafe
The Lower East Side's Korean coffeehouse churns out some of the city's most unique drinks. For fall they're introducing the Coffee-Men, which packs a cornucopia of seasonal flavors — chestnut, almond, sweet potato and cinnamon, with a kick of bacon — into one rich beverage. Be one of the first 17 customers to get one free. 99 Allen St., roundk.com

Tiny's & The Bar Upstairs
This Tribeca neighborhood restaurant will hook you up with free java in its oh-so-chic millennial-pink cups. Just walk by the outdoor patio between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. for a caffeine fix — and maybe one of chef Eduardo Martinez's double chocolate espresso cookies? 135 West Broadway, tinysnyc.com

Birch Coffee
Putting trust in the uncaffeinated is rarely smart, but that's what Birch Coffee is doing. On Sept. 29, pay what you please for any coffee beverage — which may change once you realize how much goes on behind the scenes of quality java, from how it's grown to sourcing and getting to your cup. Nine locations in Manhattan and Queens, birchcoffee.com

Black Fox Coffee
You may not get the same cup of joe twice at this Aussie café in the Financial District because its beans are constantly changing. For National Coffee Day, the shop is serving flat whites (an Australian-style latte) for $2 all day, with a side of espresso brownie. Plus, learn the art of pour-over coffee at a free workshop at 4:30 p.m. 70 Pine St., blackfoxcoffee.com

Goldfinch
Roll up to the Time Hotel's coffee bar between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. for a free cup of Stumptown drip coffee or a shot of cold brew. 224 W. 49th St., thetimehotels.com

Num Pang Kitchen
Your favorite Southeast Asian-inspired sandwich shop has a new app; download and show it at any of its five Manhattan locations for a free Cambodian iced coffee. numpangkitchen.com

Le Petit Parisien
Make it a French morning at Le Petit Parisien, where the purchase of any pastry or sandwich gets you a free coffee all day (so if you wanted to stop by twice, they'd be happy to hook you up). The brews are made with Malongo beans from France. From 7:30 a.m. at 249 E. 53rd St., Midtown East, or 8:30 a.m. at 32 E. Seventh St., East Village

Trademark Taste + Grind
It's not quiiite fall yet, so if today is another balmy one, go for a cold brew soft-serve with mocha crumble from Trademark Taste + Grind. It's made in-house and is free all day, or just $2 for the rest of the weekend. 38 W. 36th St., 7 a.m.-6 p.m., ingoodcompany.com/trademark

How to get tickets to Harry Potter on Broadway

"Harry Potter and the Cursed Child" may be the most magical production coming to Broadway next year, but it's doing everything it can to be as Muggle-friendly as possible when it comes to getting tickets.

To help cut down on scalping and bots snapping up tickets, you'll have to register beginning this weekend to buy tickets through Ticketmaster's Verified Fan program. This process will be open from Sunday, Oct. 1, at 10 a.m. through Thursday, Oct. 5, at 10 p.m. and grants you an access code for a first-come, first-served chance to buy tickets when sales begin on Wednesday, Oct. 18, at 11 a.m.

Tickets will be priced from $20 to $199 (and more for premium seats) per part for preview performances starting March 16, 2018; opening night is set for April 22, 2018, with tickets available through Nov. 18, 2018 during the initial sale.

Is Finding The Best Treatment For Your Knee Arthritis Pain Worth 30 Seconds To You?

What if… there was a way to finally get straight answers about the most cutting-edge medical treatments for knee arthritis available today…

Answers from REAL MEDICAL DOCTORS who are experts in this field…

Doctors that have already treated THOUSANDS of knee arthritis suffers…

Doctors who will tell you exactly what your best options are and what can realistically be expected… without making huge (and false) claims… just to sell a product or service… and then deliver junk that does little or nothing for your pain?

Well… now you can.

Here is how…

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with 2 locations in New York City that has medical doctors specially trained in some of the most advanced, cutting edge knee arthritis treatments available today.

And they have put together an information kit that details some of these advanced medical procedures that have already helped thousands.

Including… what you need to know about joint lubricating injections, platelet rich plasma (PRP), stem cell therapy... and more.

This free information kit contains a video and report that will also explain the two arthritis treatments paths you should know about and what "Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology" is and why it has already helped so many arthritis sufferers.

How To Get Your Information Kit…

All you have to do is go to painmdny.com/knee and click the button that says "Click here to get a free knee arthritis treatment info kit."

Then put your name and email address in the space provided and you will be emailed a video and PDF report detailing what treatment options could be the best for your arthritis pain and how we might be able to help you.

We will also send you a way to get a free screening to see if you qualify for one of the advanced medical treatments. It is 100% free with no further obligation.

If you are interested in the screening… awesome. If not, that's ok, too... at least you will have all the information and options.

And if you don't have email...

you can click the red "knee pain" button and you will instantly watch a video detailing some of your best options. If you are looking for proof... I think you will find it on this website.

After getting this information and watching the video... you will breathe a big sigh of relief knowing what your best options are and what treatments might finally relieve some or even all of your knee arthritis pain.

And let's be crystal clear about this… NYC Pain MD is a real medical clinic with real medical doctors.

You will be getting real quality information about real medical treatments.

This is NOT some fake "wonder cure." In fact… you will NEVER see any guarantee of results. This is because… in the world or science and real medicine… Guaranteeing results is impossible.

Every patients is different… and so are the results. Any doctor (or marketer!) telling you different is lying to you. I have seen some of the "miracle cure" ads that are everywhere. I bet you have too.

That being said… We will be completely upfront and honest with you. Refreshing... isn't it?

So… if you are looking for up to date... honest information about some of the best possible medical treatments for knee arthritis pain…

Go here painmdny.com/knee and request the information kit or just watch the videos on that page.

Or if you would like to reserve a free screening before they are all gone call 800-301-4250 right now.

3 Things to watch for as Giants invade Bucs

Keep getting that ball out quick

It looks like Giants quarterback Eli Manning and his offense found a groove in Philadelphia, though it was really evident during that fourth quarter when Big Blue put up 24 points.

Manning was getting the ball out of his hands in under two seconds, ensuring that he was not going to face pressure from an Eagles defensive line that is one of the better pass-rush units in football.

He'll have to keep on doing the same in order to keep the Giants' good offensive times rolling.

Healthy OBJ = Entertaining OBJ

He's back and looks better than ever.

Wide receiver Odell Beckham Jr. played a big part in waking up the Giants offense last week as the fourth-year receiver did what he does best: make plays.

He hauled in nine catches for 79 yards, a pair of touchdowns and one questionable celebration in the end zone.

The second score of his afternoon though was an acrobatic one-handed catch that was vintage Beckham, which is odd to say considering he is just 24.

Don't expect Manning's gameplan of find Beckham early and often to deviate much against a Buccaneers defense that's allowed almost 330 passing yards per game.

WEEK 4
Kickoff at 4:05 p.m. on FOX

Stop the run

A lot has been made of the Giants defense, especially the secondary and pass rush which has been solid so far.

The same can't be said about the run game as New York has allowed 460 yards on the ground through three games, the most in the NFL.

Tampa Bay will be looking to get Jacquizz Rodgers and Peyton Barber plenty of touches against to try and spark their run game.

In two games, they have just 143 yards on the ground and need to take some pressure off quarterback Jameis Winston and the pass game.

The mobile Winston presents another kind of problem that Eagles quarterback Carson Wentz highlighted last week. New York has always had problems shutting down scrambling quarterbacks and Wentz was able to pick up a pair of first downs on a 3rd-and-8 and 4th-and-1.

If the backs aren't getting things done for Tampa and Winston is forced to depend on the pass game, we could see him running at once he feels the pressure. JOE PANTORNO

Week 4 has become must-win game for Giants

Eli Manning and the Giants, once slated to make the playoffs this year, are facing do-or-die situations and it's only Week 4 of the 2017 NFL season. GETTY IMAGES

At 0-3, the New York Giants face a must-win game this Sunday at the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. The very thought of the Giants being in this predicament a month ago was the furthest thing from the mind of a team that had legitimate Super Bowl chatter swirling about it.

But now, the Giants face a game that they must win. If they don't, then their season is likely over on the first day of October.

Yikes.

The Giants aren't publicly in panic mode, although a loss would doom the team to playing out the string for the season's remaining 13 weeks. They talk about returning to fundamentals and playing the brand of football that got them into the playoffs last season under head coach Ben McAdoo.

They also can point to the fact that a handful of other teams have, in the long history of the NFL, started 0-3 and made the playoffs. Likely? Not really. But not impossible.

"One day at a time. It starts by coming in and we know we lost the game, but we got to move on from it and it starts in practice," defensive end Jason Pierre-Paul said this week.

"I feel like we are going to come out and do great in practice this week. Coach McAdoo said some words to us and he really don't have to say any words to us. You can just feel the energy, the vibe around us. Everybody is just really soaking it in and getting ready for the next game."

But the Giants must win and they must on this Sunday.

Sunday's loss to the Philadelphia Eagles on a last-second field goal was gut-wrenching and heartbreaking. But the explosion of the offense in the fourth quarter including 11-consecutive completions from quarterback Eli Manning was a positive sign that they may have turned the corner. Perhaps, just in time to save their season.

The fact that Manning wasn't sacked in the game is a good thing too, especially given the play of the offensive line to date.

But the defense had several broken plays, unnecessary penalties and folded late in the game when they needed a stop to force overtime. Instead, the Eagles kicked the longest field goal in Lincoln Financial Field history to doom the Giants to being winless in their first three games.

"Our mindset is we have to get this win right here. Get our first win and go from there," Manning said. "So, we have a long football season left and anything is possible, but still the focus is on the next game no matter if we're 3-0 or 1-2 or whatever. Next game is the most important one. That's where we are right now." KRISTIAN DYER

3 Things to watch for as Jets host Jaguars

The efficient Josh McCown

While the Jets are basically playing to draft either Josh Rosen or Sam Darnold next year, their current quarterback has been a pleasant surprise.

Through three games he's 60-for-86 with 602 yards, three touchdowns and two interceptions.

All three of those touchdowns have come in his last two games, as he completed 34-of-57 passes for 415 yards in the process.

He meets a big challenge in the Jaguars pass defense, which has allowed the least amount of yards this year.

LSU clash awaits

A pair of LSU teammates and 2017 first-round picks will probably see a lot of each other on Sunday.

Jets safety Jamal Adams and Jaguars running back Leonard Fournette were teammates at the Louisiana institution from 2014-2016.

They won a pair of bowl games during their time together, but were never able to mount a serious run at the College Football Playoff.

Fournette was taken fourth overall by Jacksonville before Adams was nabbed at No. 6 by Gang Green.

"It's friendly competition," Adams said, via ESPN. "When we're on the field, we go at it. It's been like that since our LSU days. We feed off each other, so it's going to be a great matchup."

WEEK 4
Kickoff at 1 p.m. on CBS

Here comes the boom

Don't look now, but the Jaguars have one of the more imposing defenses in the NFL.

For an organization that has represented ineptitude for the last decade, things look to be trending up for Jacksonville.

And it all starts with the defense. The Jaguars rank fourth in the NFL in total defense, yielding just 779 yards in three games.

Their 373 passing yards allowed is least in the league and their 51 points given up is sixth-best. A loaded secondary with A.J. Bouye and Jalen Ramsey headlines a unit that has four interceptions already.

They rank first with 13 sacks while veteran defensive tackle Calais Campbell, who came over from the Arizona Cardinals during the offseason, is third in the league with 4.5 of his own.

Needless to say, McCown and his offense have a lot on their plate considering they haven't scored over 20 points in a single game this year.

JOE PANTORNO

Jets have better playoff odds than Giants... No, we're not kidding

The New York Jets have a better chance to make the playoffs than the New York Giants. That requires repeating. The New York Jets have a better chance to make the playoffs than the New York Giants.

All those jokes about the Jets having the worst collection of talent in the NFL are dead, at least for a week.

After a Week 3 win over the Miami Dolphins, the Jets are 1-2 and suddenly feeling pretty good about life.

The rebuilding franchise looked just like that during first two games at the Buffalo Bills and the Oakland Raiders, but they are coming off a win on Sunday against a Dolphins team that made the playoffs last year.

The Giants, on the other hand, are 0-3 and facing a must-win game at the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on Sunday. A Wild Card team a season ago, the Giants were expected to challenge for the NFC East and maybe the Super Bowl this year.

The Jets are flying high. GETTY IMAGES

Instead, the Jets have a better shot at the postseason. That's right, the Jets. In fact, the Jets have a better shot than a handful of teams. Who saw that coming a couple of weeks ago?

FootballOutsiders.com, utilizing 50,000 simulations of the entire season, has the Giants making the playoffs in 4.4 percent of all simulations. They actually have a better chance of getting the top pick in next spring's NFL Draft (7.2 percent) than making the postseason or getting a first-round bye in the playoffs (two percent).

The Jets, on the flip side, are suddenly buoyant. They now have a 6.5 percent chance of making the playoffs. Not only that, the Jets hold a 3.5 percent chance to win the AFC East.

The worst playoff odds in the league remain the Cleveland Browns, who have a 1.1 percent chance to get into the postseason.

Aries Overdoing it will be your downfall. Don't let temptation lead to excessive behavior. Walk away from unpredictable individuals.

Taurus Tie up loose ends. Go for an interview or enhance your resume to reflect the job you would like to be doing. Celebrate with someone you love.

Gemini Step back from emotionally unpredictable situations and people. Refuse to get caught in someone else's melodrama. Meddling will end up being costly.

Cancer Joint ventures are best looked at carefully before you decide to get involved. Don't make promises you may not be able to honor. Hold on to your cash.

Leo Choose practicality over desire and impulse. You can bring about change without taking a risk if you do your research before moving forward.

Virgo A physical challenge will motivate you to make changes geared toward self-improvement and personal growth. Love and romance are featured.

Libra By putting more effort into your home and family, you will excel. Learn from experience what works best for you, and do what's right.

Scorpio Reconnecting with old friends or colleagues will lead to interesting talks and new possibilities. The ideas that develop will spark your imagination.

Sagittarius You may crave change, but don't let temptation or indulgent behavior lead to personal, emotional or financial setbacks. Be realistic and moderate.

Capricorn Impulsive actions will be met with resistance. Be careful how you handle emotional situations. If someone is asking too much of you, back away.

Aquarius You may crave excitement and adventure, but don't let it lead to a costly affair. Keep your passwords protected and your personal belongings in a safe place.

Pisces Overreacting to situations involving a business or personal partner will be costly. Assess the situation before you jump to conclusions. EUGENIA LAST
